

Figure 1. Lower Duwamish Waterway site location, Seattle, Washington

Figure 2. LDW site boundaries in relation to rockfish sample locations

Figure 3. Lower Duwamish Waterway Area and Combined Sewer Overflows (CSOs), Seattle, Washington

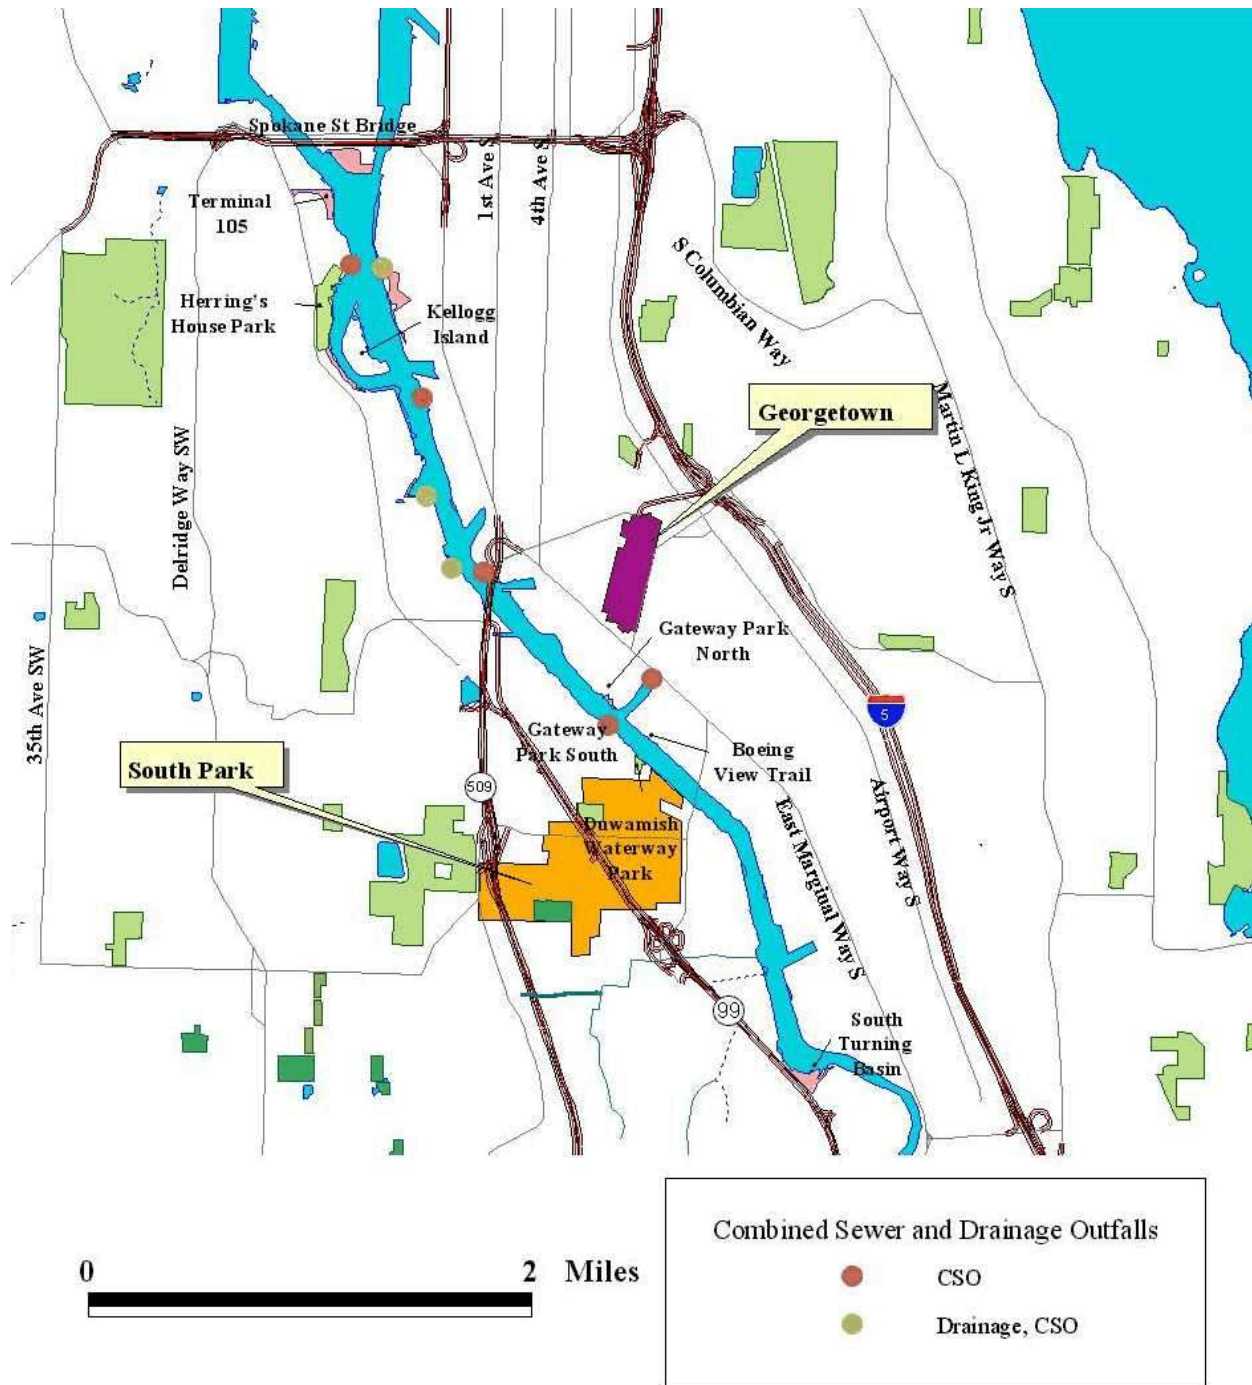

Figure 4. Key public access locations on the Lower Duwamish Waterway where risks from exposure to contaminants in sediment through direct contact were evaluated, Seattle, Washington

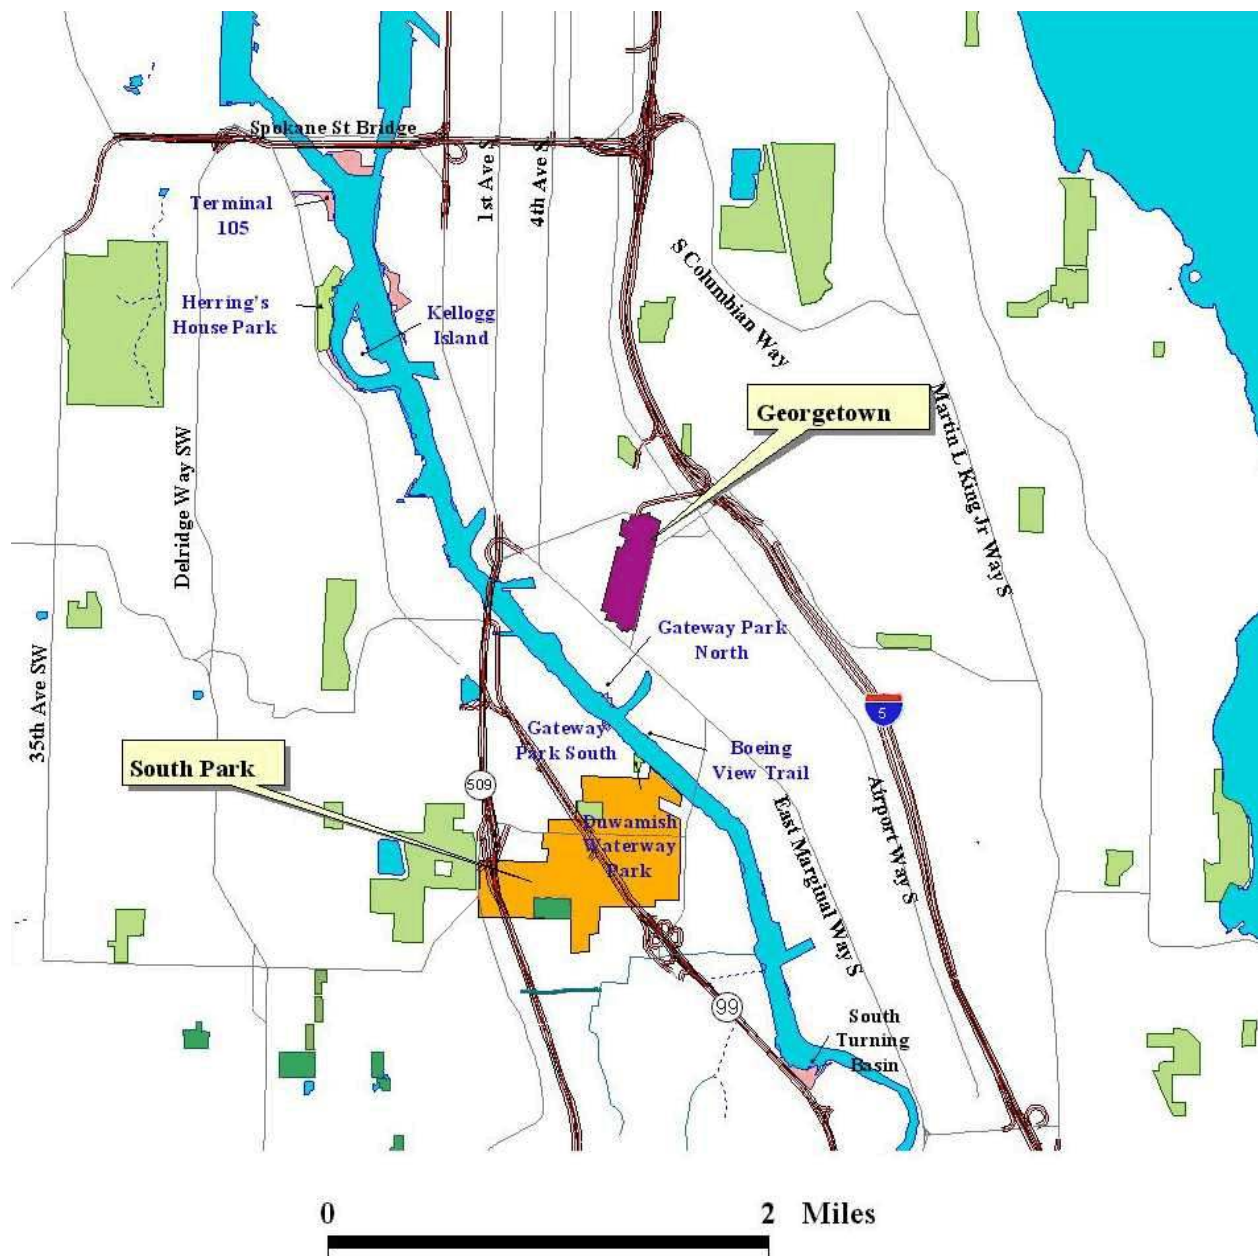

Figure 5. Intertidal and Subtidal Sediment samples within 1000 ft of Duwamish Waterway Park access point, Lower Duwamish Waterway, Seattle, Washington.

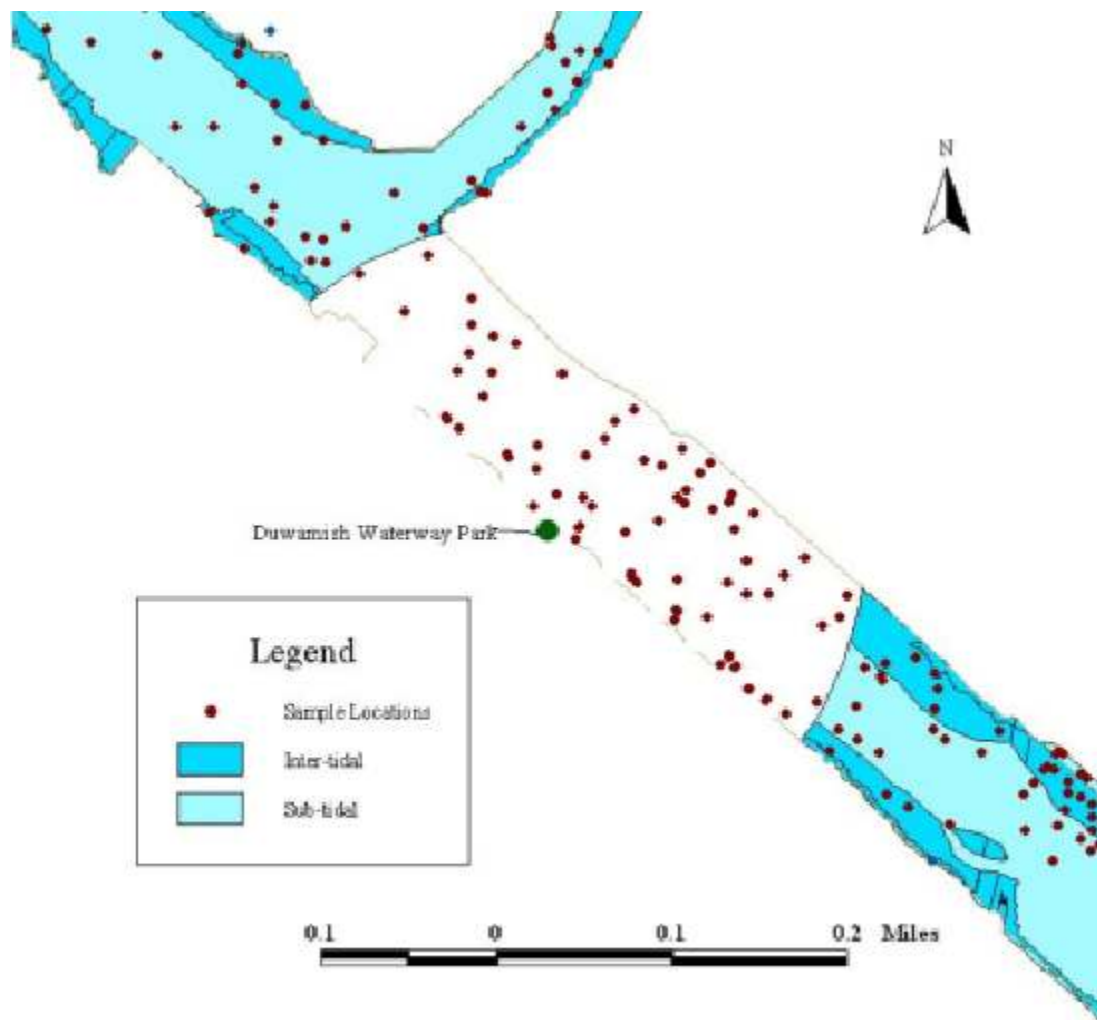

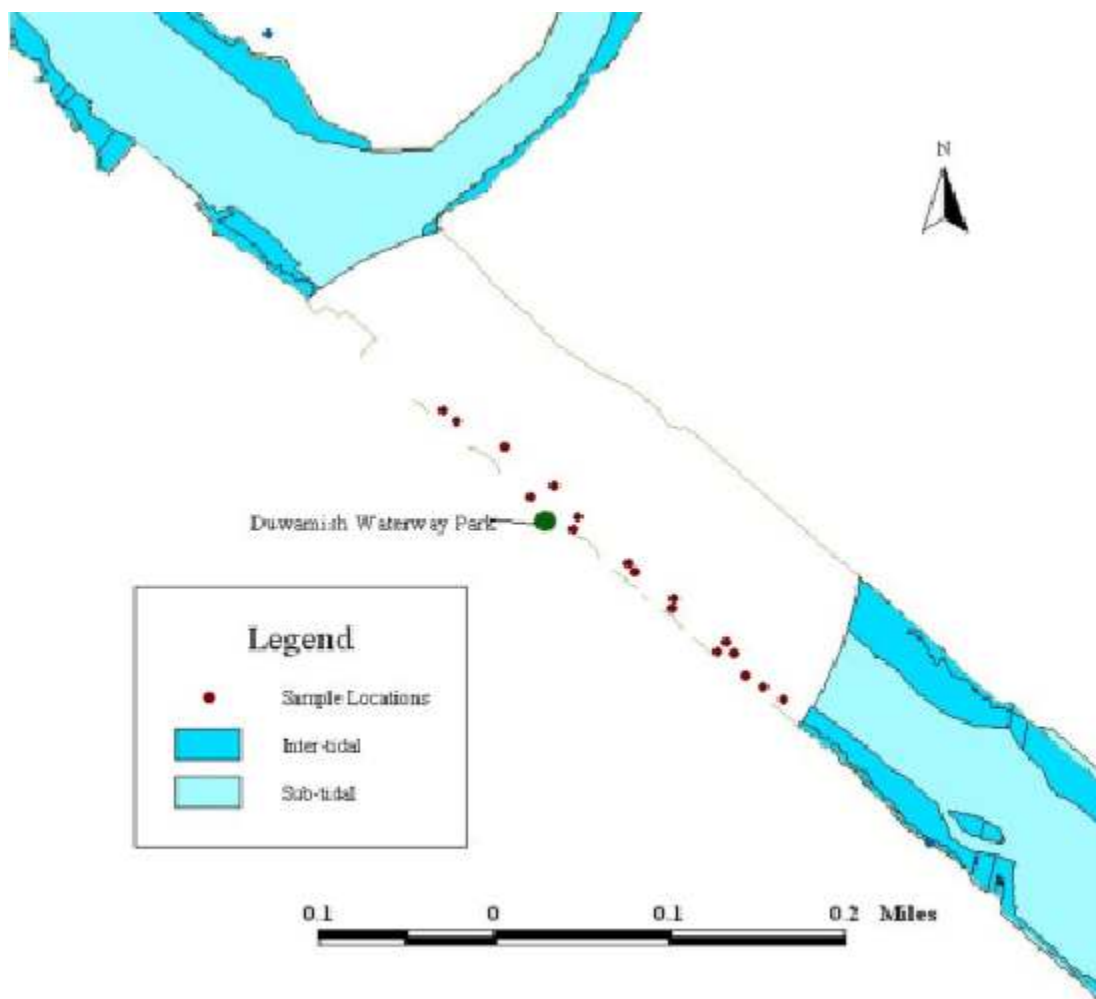

Figure 6. Intertidal sediment samples near Duwamish Waterway Park access area, Lower Duwamish Waterway, Seattle, Washington.

NOTE: Intertidal samples on the same bank of the LDW within 1000 ft of an access point were assumed to be the representative of that location, and used for evaluating direct contact exposures at public access areas.

Figure 7. Aerial image of Kellogg Island intertidal area, Lower Duwamish Waterway, Seattle, Washington. Shellfish harvesting may occur at this location presently and in the future.

Figure 8. Shellfish restrictions along the shoreline including the Lower Duwamish Waterway. Seattle, King County, Washington.

